Driving The Next Startup Wave

IEEE Entrepreneurship at TechCrunch Disrupt 2018
Earlier this month, members of the IEEE Entrepreneurship staff and community attended TechCrunch Disrupt, in San Francisco, California.

Our Judges Veronica Osinski, Carlee Price, and Ryan Rogowski, spoke with 10 tech startups on the show floor for a chance to become an IEEE N3XT® Star.

IEEE N3XT® Star Highlight:

Cyfive

Cyfive tracks biometrics related to health and provides the consumer with this information to empower them to make better decisions. They do this through biometric tracking temporary tattoos.

Cyfive became an IEEE N3XT® Star at TechCrunch Disrupt 2018. Read about it here.

IEEE N3XT® Rising Star Highlight:

Cedar Robotics

Cedar Robotics is striving to help restaurants improve customer experience and operating efficiency. They provide the restaurant owners with end to end systems that are easy to install and intuitive to use.

Two Entrepreneurs on Why They Founded Socially Conscious Companies

Not all startups are concerned only with turning a profit. Some make it their mission to create products or services that will improve society. That’s the case for two founders who participated in the “Social Impact and the Role of Engineers in Today’s Society” panel discussion during the IEEE Vision, Innovation, and Challenges Summit.
